1. Who runs this website

This website is published by Andrea Cavazzini, a private individual resident in Italy, who develops S.T.A.R. as an independent project. S.T.A.R. is not, at this date, a company or a registered business. Contact: Info.and.News.S.T.A.R@proton.me.

2. What the website is

An information site about the S.T.A.R. software packages, the published verification evidence and the engineering assessment service that can be requested by email. Nothing can be bought on the website and no account can be created.

Anyone may browse the website. Writing to the owner requires being 14 or older, and requesting a paid service or signing a contract requires being an adult (see minimum age). How paid work is agreed and invoiced is described in payments and invoicing.

3. Use of the content

- The software packages are distributed under the Apache License 2.0, as stated in each package; their use is governed by that licence, not by these terms.

- Texts, page layout and graphics of the website remain the property of the owner. You may quote them with attribution and a link.
- The S.T.A.R. name and logo may not be used to suggest endorsement or affiliation (see the trademark and attribution policy).

4. No professional advice, no certification

Technical information on this website describes what was tested, with which inputs and limits. It is not a certification, a qualification for flight or a guarantee that any software is free of defects. See the evidence and verification disclaimer.

5. Availability and external links

The website may change or be unavailable at any time. Links to third-party sites (for example GitHub) are provided for convenience; their owners are responsible for their content and their own terms.

6. Acceptable use

Do not attempt to disrupt the website, to access systems you are not authorised to access, or to use the contact address for unsolicited advertising. Security research is welcome under the vulnerability disclosure policy.

7. Liability

To the extent permitted by law, the owner is not liable for losses arising from the use of the free information and software on this website. This never excludes liability for wilful misconduct or gross negligence (Italian Civil Code, art. 1229), nor any right that cannot be limited under Italian or European law, including the rights of consumers.

8. Changes and law

These terms may be updated; the version and date above identify the current text. Italian law applies; for consumers, the court of their place of residence is competent and the mandatory protections of their country of residence remain.
